COALITION BEING SPLIT?

Democrat Chief Believes Truman Plan To Get OK

WASHINGTON, March 19—Senate Majority Leader Lucas, (D) Ill., predicted today that the Truman legislative program will move along "pretty well" despite the Southern-GOP filibuster coalition.

Lucas expressed belief that cooperation between Southern Democrats and Republicans will not continue, although he admitted hearing a rumor that "there may be a filibuster on rent control."

The rent control extension bill is now before the Senate. Debate opens Monday, and Lucas announced he may hold a night session to speed consideration of the measure.

GOP Floor Leader Wherry, (R) Neb., challenged the Democratic claim that the coalition had run its course. Wherry said the voting lineup might be different in the future, but that the "end result will be the same."

Lucas pointed out that Southern Democrats head committees handling three of the pending major bills.

RENT CONTROL is being handled by Sen. Maybrink, (D) S. C., foreign aid is under Sen. Connally, (D) Tex., and reciprocal trade extension is managed by Sen. George, (D) Ga. All three were leaders in the fight against tightening gag rule, Lucas said.

"Our (northern) fellows disagreed with the Southerners in an honorable way. There is no feeling now that I can see between the Northern and Southern Democrats. If the Republicans had been with us as they should, there wouldn't have been anything to this."

Lucas said he did not believe the coalition would continue and "certainly" hoped it would not.

He noted that President Truman, in his first public statement on this week's filibuster showdown, indicated that "he still thinks his program will go along."

Europe Hails New Treaty

PARIS, March 19 — Europe's Democratic statesmen hailed the historic Atlantic pact today as a solemn notice to Russia that new aggression will bring down on Communism the armed wrath of the Western World.

All expressed the hope that the new balance of power created by the alliance may serve to maintain world peace for generations to come.

But official Soviet reaction to the pact was anxiously awaited. While Moscow radio launched into an immediate denunciation of the treaty as a "war-mongering" attack on Russia, there was yet no clear indication of what counter-action the Kremlin will take.

Moscow Radio said that the Soviet government newspaper Izvestia has termed the pact an "aggressive conspiracy against peace."

An earlier broadcast charged that the treaty "means war on the Soviet Union."

IN AN ENGLISH language broadcast by Soviet Commentator Lemm, Moscow Radio charged that the pact was framed by "Anglo-American imperialists."

The broadcast, heard in London by the Soviet monitor, declared:

"It is not only Italy which fights the Atlantic pact."

"Millions of people realize that the pact means war on the Soviet Union. They are convinced that the anti-Communist campaign conceals the desire of Anglo-American imperialists to strangle the freedom and sovereignty of other nations and plunge them into the maelstrom of a new war in the interests of Anglo-American world domination."

Vivien Kellems Daring Treasury On Taxes Again

WASHINGTON, March 19 — Uncle Sam turned a cold shoulder today to Vivien Kellems' latest blast at American income tax methods.

Tax collectors cautioned, however, that the New England businesswoman may find herself in hot water if she goes through with intentions to flaunt tax regulations.

Officially, there was "no comment" on a letter from the Saugatuck, Conn., manufacturer to Treasury Secretary Snyder in which she dared him to "emulate Mr. Stalin" and "confiscate my property."

Miss Kellems off and on for the last year has addressed letters to the treasury chief voicing in no uncertain terms what she thinks of the pay-as-you-go tax system.

She has refused to extract weekly withholding taxes from her employees because the government does not pay her for acting as a federal "agent."

The latest letter, which officials said has not as yet shown (Continued on Page Two)

32 Boxcars Pile In Wreck

COLUMBUS, March 19 — Thirty-two loaded boxcars were wrecked today when a diesel-driven Pennsylvania Railroad freight train cracked up on the western outskirts of Columbus, blocking both east and west through traffic. No one was injured.

Contained in the chain of cars were three gasoline tankers, which spilled highly-explosive fuel over the track area. Precautions were taken immediately to guard against fire.

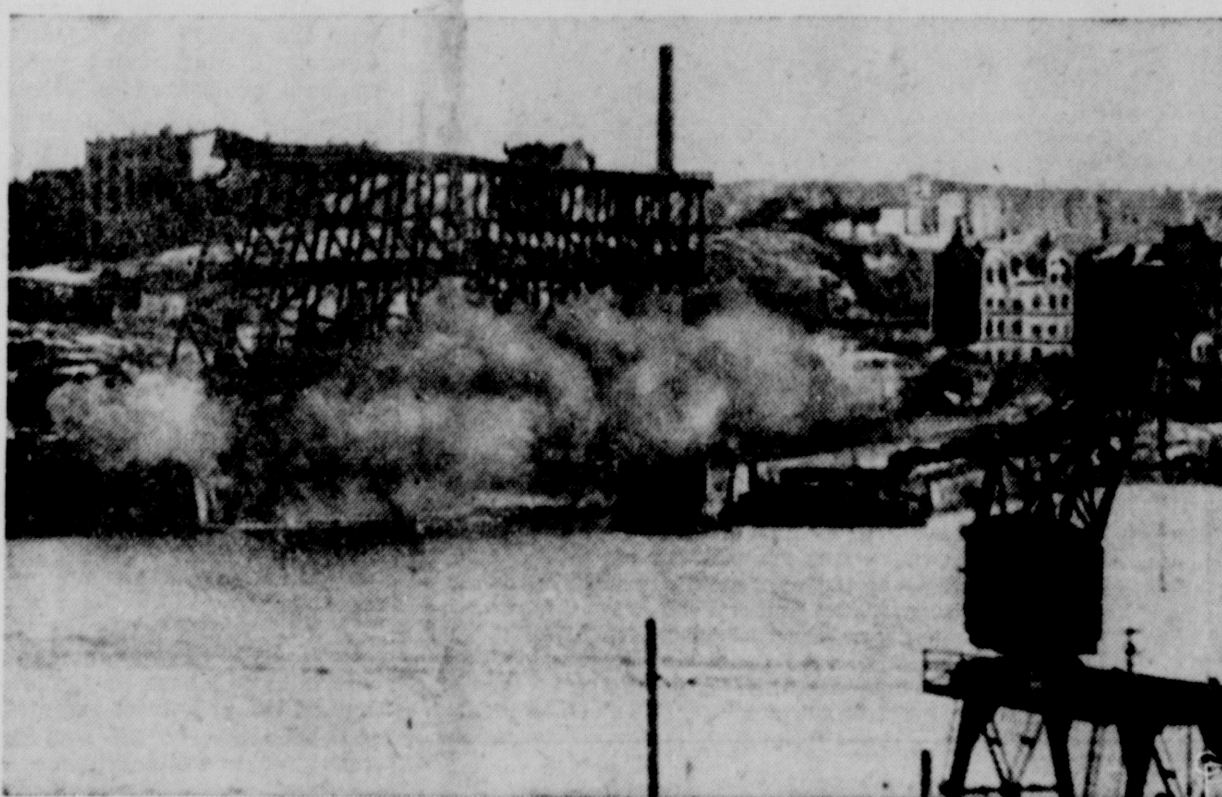

The 97-car, St. Louis-to-Columbus train was expected to block the tracks until late today, forcing rerouting of all Chicago-New York traffic over the B and O lines through Piqua.

J. M. Williamson, division superintendent, said the 48,000-ton wreckage contained five carloads of flour for European export and a carload of wine.

Local Churches Round Out Varied Repair Programs

Several of Circleville's churches are in the process of brightening up their buildings with repairs, redecorations and other improvements. At the same time, some have tentative plans for enlargements, a survey here showed Friday.

Approximately $50,000 is being spent to remodel the Presbyterian church on East Mound street, according to Louis B. Mebs, contractor. Most of the work has already been accomplished, he said.

A large portion of the quoted figure was bequeathed to the church under the terms of the late Elizabeth Ruggles.

While most of the remodeling has been done inside, the exterior of the church has not been neglected. Brickwork has been pointed, woodwork painted, and stained glass windows cleaned and repaired.

Hand wrought copper cornices have been added to the tower, which has been repaired and reconstructed. The final, which is the point of the cross-shaped device surmounting the steeple, has been restored, according to the Rev. Donald E. Mitchell.

IN THE BASEMENT, old wooden pillars supporting the floor above were found to be filled with termites, Rev. Mr. Mitchell said. He added that the pillars have been removed and replaced with steel posts.

With an eye to fire protection, church authorities have had the entire basement fireproofed. Steel doors, which close automatically when the temperature

U.S. Rushing Plans On Atlantic Pact

West Hemisphere Accord Expected By State Chiefs

WASHINGTON, March 19 — The United States rushed plans today to turn the proposed North Atlantic Alliance into a forceful weapon for ending the cold war.

The immediate problem is that of obtaining speedy Senate ratification after the mutual defense pact is signed in Washington early in April.

Approval of the new agreement presumably would place the United States in position, in event of attack, to invoke simultaneously the Rio and the North Atlantic pacts.

A State Department spokesman pointed out that 21 American republics as well as the seven other powers in the new agreement would be lined up for mutual assistance.

Department Spokesman Michael J. McDermott emphasized, however, that under the Rio treaty the Latin American nations would be obligated to assist the United States only in meeting an attack within the Western Hemisphere security zone.

WITH RESPECT to the Atlantic treaty, another pressing task is the drafting of a mutual defense aid bill under which the United States will help to build European land, sea and air units to full efficiency.

It will be included in an omnibus military aid program likely to cost the United States nearly $2 billion in the next year.

It will bring up to date the military equipment of the Atlantic pact nations and provide military assistance for Iran, Greece, Turkey and Latin-America.

While this project is being rushed, administration leaders are watching for any sign of a Russian counter-move to the newly published treaty.

Violent demonstrations against the agreement during the two weeks before signing are anticipated. A certain amount of sword-rattling designed to discourage such exposed powers as Italy, Denmark and Iceland from finally joining is believed inevitable.

Officials are convinced, however, that aside from possible deployment of troops along strategic borders, the Kremlin will make no overt move to provoke hostilities.

But the turmoil is expected to exceed that which followed development of the Marshall Plan.

To discourage such demonstrations, every available outlet of information available to the government is tuned to proclaiming the proposed alliance as a peace move. The opening gun was fired by Secretary of State Acheson.

IN A 30-MINUTE radio address, Acheson proclaimed a program of a peace offensive. He said:

"If peace and security can be achieved in the North Atlantic area we shall have gone a long way to assure peace and security in other areas as well."

"The achievement of peace and security means more than (Continued on Page Two)

UN Awaits Fireworks

Red Walkout Rumors Heard

LAKE SUCCESS, March 19—United Nations officials and delegates are convinced today that the world body is destined to become the main battleground between Russia and signatories of the Atlantic pact.

The weekend exodus and the heavy snowfall brought a convenient pause in activities at Lake Success, where the hope is that by Monday the implications of the Atlantic pact will have come into clearer perspective.

Publication of the treaty's provision caused no visible excitement in UN headquarters, where members of the Soviet bloc attending the Economic and Social Council meetings remained silent.

But an uneasy atmosphere continued to prevail, despite Secretary General Lieke's reluctant acceptance of the regional pact in the absence of military backing for UN by the big powers.

Although there are no signs that the Soviet bloc is preparing to walk out of the world body, rumors to that effect continue to circulate.

ONE CONTRIBUTING factor to these rumors is the long absence in Moscow of Assistant Secretary General Arkady Sobolev, who is in charge of Security Council affairs.

Lieke said yesterday that he has twice communicated with the Russian and received requests from him for permission to extend his leave. Lieke stated that Sobolev proceeded to Moscow some weeks ago on the claim that his son is gravely ill.

At the United Nations, a number of Western delegates and others pointed to the fact that Andrei Vishinsky and Andrei Gromyko have been promoted to top ranking positions in Moscow.

Both have concerned themselves in the last three years largely with the UN affairs of Russia, in both the General Assembly and Security Council.

In general, Soviet sources privately emphasize that in their viewpoint the Western powers have "deserted" UN by erecting a rival military combine which strips the world body of all effective authority.

Western representatives are inclined to stress the fact that the Atlantic pact falls within the charter and as such is bound to have at least some beneficial effects.

Chinese Sink Deserter Ship

LONDON, March 19 — Reuters reported from Nanking today that the Nationalist government has announced the sinking of the Destroyer Hwang, which deserted to the Communists on March 13.

Reuters quoted the newspaper Evening Post as saying that the ship was sunk in Hsuehchow harbor, where the crew members were in barracks on the shore, after a three-day bombing.

Wheelerburg Student Strike Seen Continuing

PORTSMOUTH, March 19 — Indications today were that more than 100 striking students at Wheelerburg high school will remain away from classes again Monday.

A negotiation meeting between the school board and student representatives was held last night but officials said efforts to settle the dispute were fruitless.

The students who attended the meeting, but who refuse to attend classes, added half a dozen complaints last night to the original cause of the strike.

When they walked out recently, the teen-agers said the musical instructor, George T. Thomas, had been forced to resign.

Last night a large group complained to the school board that social activities at the school were limited, support of winning athletic teams was not forthcoming and organization of a parent-teacher association has been ignored.

School Principal C. H. Duduit was ill last night and unable to attend the meeting, to which eight students had been invited, but which was swamped by eager representatives airing complaints.

Donald McCowen, assistant principal, in critical condition from a kidney ailment, also was unable to attend the board meeting.

The board said the matter will have to be referred to administration officials.

Coal Walkout Pinching Steel

PITTSBURGH, March 19—The sixth day of John L. Lewis' two-week "memorial" mine strike today found the steel industry beginning to feel the pinch.

The Sharon Steel Corp. announced yesterday it will close one blast furnace and four open hearths at its Farrell, Pa., works on Monday because of a coke shortage.

The company indicated that between 200 and 300 steel workers may be idled as a result.

Other larger steel producers in the district reported that their mills will continue at full production unless the stoppage is prolonged past March 28.

With coal production in the nation east of the Mississippi choked off, river traffic on the Ohio river and its tributaries, where coal represents most of the freight, has slowed to a trickle.

ST. CLAIRSVILLE, March 19 — Air Force officials from Wright Field, near Dayton, were conducting an on-the-scene investigation today into a plane crash that claimed the lives of two reservists.

The victims were identified as Lt. Robert Woods and Lt. Herman Eitel, both of Akron.

Churches Repairing Properties

In the sanctuary has been rubbed to give it a dull finish. Organ pipes were removed and refinished, the organ being sealed against dust while this work proceeded.

Imperial burgundy carpeting has been chosen to cover the sanctuary floor, Rev. Mr. Mitchell said. The symbolic meaning of the color was one reason for the choice. A secondary reason was that it matches a border around the stained glass windows.

THE SUNDAY school room adjoining the sanctuary is separated by a new plastic accordion door. In this room, a 26-year-old carpet has been cleaned and relaid.

Another room that has been redecorated is the kitchen, which has been made roomier by combining two small former kitchens. New cabinets have been built in and a new flooring of rubberized tile laid. A new hotel range has been installed. The walls have been painted lemon-yellow.

The social room, where Sunday services are being held while the work of remodeling proceeds, has been painted a soft green, and the walls have been moisture-proofed with flat hollow tile.

Throughout the church electric wiring has been replaced. New cathedral lighting fixtures will be installed later, according to Mebs, who said this type of fixture is hand wrought and there will be some delay before they can be obtained.

Other churches in Circleville are also in the midst of remodeling and redecorating plans.

The Rev. Carl L. Wilson said Friday that the First Evangelical United Brethren church plans the construction of a new building to occupy the site of the present community house. The new structure will be 50 feet by 80 feet, he said, and will contain two stories. It will be used for social, educational and religious purposes, he added.

PLANS FOR the building are still in the committee stage, Rev. Mr. Wilson said, although several contractors and architects have been asked to submit bids.

The Rev. Elisha Kneisley said plans are in the making for the redecoration of First Methodist Church. An entire new heating plant is scheduled for installation in the basement, and plans for redecoration of the kitchen are in the offing.

Already considerable work has been completed in basement social rooms. New stoves have been installed in kitchens and old baseboards torn out.

St. Philips Episcopal church already has been redecorated, according to the Rev. L. C. Sherrill, rector. He said the church auditorium has been painted pale green. The parish house and the gymnasium also have been redecorated, he said.

Church of the Nazarene completed redecoration to its church building some time ago and now is in the initial stages of planning construction of a new parsonage.

Part of this preliminary campaign calls for the raising of funds through the collection of "a bushel of pennies."

Cleric Refusing Pay Income Tax

CINCINNATI, March 19—A Cincinnati minister today refused to pay 60 percent of his income tax, claiming that the United States is moving closer to war "day by day."

The Rev. Maurice F. McCrackin, pastor of St. Barnabas church, said that "to give financial support to war, while preaching against it, is to me no longer a tenable position. In the direction we are going lies race suicide."

THE LADY industrialist went on to say that if the government again plans to confiscate her property as was done last year for violating regulations she will provide a list of her assets. She asserted:

"If you are to again emulate Mr. Stalin, I will give your agent the list. The American people wish to know just how far their government has progressed on the path of dictatorship. So, send him along, Mr. Secretary, I dare you."

One official labeled Miss Kellems a "publicity hound" and asserted that legal devices are available to deal with the problem.

Under present law, employers have 30 days after every three-month period to remit withholding taxes collected from employees. After that deadline, a six percent interest charge is added and failure to transmit the funds is a violation.

UMW Chief Tips Newest Demand

WASHINGTON, March 19—John L. Lewis' 1949 contract demands are expected to include requests for a boost in the United Mine Workers 20-cents-a-ton welfare fund royalty.

Lewis also may ask a reduction in the miners' retirement age under the union pension program.

Police Baffled Over 'Lost Day' And Death Of Boston Man, 52

BOSTON, March 19—A Back Bay mother, stunned with shock and bewilderment, unfolded today the story of her "lost day" and its tragic prelude.

Mrs. Katherine Donahue, mother of two small children, told police how her husband, Michael 52, died at her feet as the aftermath of a family quarrel.

Then, in a halting and shocking voice, she pieced together the remnants of the 28 hours that followed; how she mechanically performed her household duties, fed, bathed, and put to bed her two small children, and roamed with unseeing eyes through her small three-room flat.

It began the afternoon of St. Patrick's Day, she recalled.

"We were arguing about the parade that day, and I don't know how it happened—but it seems that I pushed him and he fell."

MRS. DONAHUE paused, as if trying to reach back into her mind for another link in the half-forgotten events. She said: "He got up and staggered into the kitchen. He fell against a table. He got up again and stumbled into the bathroom, and fell to the floor there."

Another uncertain pause. Then Mrs. Donahue added: "He again pulled himself up and staggered out to the hall, where he fell and lay still by the door."

Mrs. Donahue said she knelt by her husband's body and then blacked out. That was at 3:30 p. m. Thursday.

Last night awareness returned once more to the wife. She saw her husband's body in the doorway, rushed to the telephone, and frantically told police:

"Please come quick. My husband is dead."

Dr. J. William Hite arrived as the police got there. He quoted Mrs. Donahue as saying: "I don't remember what happened afterward. All of a sudden I found myself standing over him. It was just like I came out of a sleep. It was terrible to see him lying there dead."

Mrs. Donahue was taken to the hospital, and her two children to a private home.

However, one odd link remained.

Authorities said Donahue's body, when discovered, was clad only in pajama bottoms.

The stunned woman had told them her husband was not dressed for bed when the dispute began.

They could only conclude that at some time during the "lost day," Mrs. Donahue had changed his clothes, readied him for bed, and then wandered off to another chore.

U.S. Rushes Plans For New Pact

that in the final outcome we shall have prevented war and brought about the settlement of international disputes by peaceful means.

"There must be a conviction of people everywhere that war will be prevented and that disputes will be settled peacefully."

Acheson insisted that the pact is not working effectively as we United Nations whose "system is no working effectively as we hoped because one of its members has attempted to prevent it from working." He continued:

"By obstructive tactics, and misuse of the veto, the Soviet Union has seriously interfered with the work of the Security Council in maintaining international peace and security."

The pact itself was described by Acheson as a logical regional arrangement, well within the provision of the UN charter. The secretary declared:

"We have also learned that if the free nations of the world do not stand together, they will fall one by one."

"The stratagem of the aggressor is to keep his intended victims divided, or better still, set them to quarreling among themselves. Then they can be picked off one by one without rousing unified resistance."

Acheson emphasized that the agreement is not an automatic signal for war in vent one power is attacked. He explained that Congress will have to decide that point and will base its judgment first on the gravity of the attack and, secondly, on the measures called for to restore peace and security.

IN EVENT of a "calculated armed attack" such as those which precipitated two world wars, Acheson said he did not doubt that the nation would be morally obligated to use armed force.

But he added emphatically: "This country is not planning to make war against anyone. It is not seeking war. It abhors war. It does not hold war to be inevitable. Its policies are devised with the specific aim of bridging by peaceful means the tremendous differences which beset international society at the present time."

Crap-Shooting To Be Added By Monte Carlo

NEW YORK, March 19—The great American indoor sport of crap-shooting today acquired international prestige with the announcement that "rolling the bones" will start at famed Monte Carlo next July 15.

The announcement was made by Louis Ceresol, director of gambling at the Mediterranean resort, and Albert Jauffret, his chief croupier, as they prepared to return home after studying crap-shooting at Las Vegas, Sun Valley, Reno and other U. S. gambling centers.

The one point worrying the two representatives of the little principality of Monaco, which operates the resort, was that the traditional phrases of crap-shooters will lose their flavor in French.

"Snake eyes" will become "les yeux du serpent" and "boxcars" at Monte Carlo will be "wagons de marchandises."

Interviewed at the office of Pierre Clavel, Monaco's representative, the gambling chiefs said the "Salon de Craps" at Monte Carlo would be the first since the casino became a citadel of roulette in 1858.

GI Files Suit For $400,000

COLUMBUS, March 19—A Lockbourne Air Force soldier today sued the Columbus-Celina Bus Co. and two Columbus persons for $400,000 for the loss of his legs.

Sgt. Willie Rattler, 29, filed a $200,000 suit yesterday against the bus company and named Faye C. Powell and Roy Bradley in a companion suit.

Rattler was standing behind a stalled bus when a car he says was driven by Miss Powell and owned by Bradley crashed into him, pinning him to the bus.

BUCYRUS, March 19—Petitions for a city manager plan of government for this city of 10,000 may be circulated by the city's Junior Chamber of Commerce.

To be placed on the ballot next November, proponents would have to secure 400 signatures to the petitions.

Auto Pilfering Probe Underway By Cops Here

Phone calls, pouring into Circleville police station Friday night, kept police busy for two hours searching for a man said to be pilfering articles from autos.

The calls came from outraged citizens who claimed to have seen the offender in the act of taking such articles as gloves, flashlights and a first aid kit from parked cars.

One angry woman said the pilferer had climbed out on one side of her car as she entered the other. Two shifts of policemen went to work to find him.

Game Warden Clarence Francis and Walter Richards finally brought in Robert Farmer, 29, of Lincolnton, N. C., according to Police Chief William McCready. Farmer is being held for investigation, the chief said.

He is alleged to have entered cars owned by Robert Weaver, removing keys and a flashlight; Kenneth Dewey, removing gloves; Harry Gatrell, removing a flashlight; and Russ Imler, removing a muffler, according to police records.

erners on the gag rule compromise, conceded that while there is no coalition now there is still a "natural alignment" between Democratic and Republican conservatives.

President Truman returns to Washington today in a mood to reason with, rather than to do battle with a recalcitrant Congress.

THE CHIEF executive will end his two-week vacation in South Florida when he boards his special plane, The Independence, at the Boca Chica Naval Air station today.

Tonight, he will attend the annual dinner of the White House Photographers' Association—the only thing that has drawn him back to the White House at this time when he would have preferred to spend another week in Key West.

The chief executive is rested and tanned after his brief vacation. It has taken him away from the tremendous pressures that engulf him in Washington—however brief it has been.

The President made it amply clear yesterday when he met White House correspondents that he will pursue a course of reason with Congress.

He admitted that emotions have risen in the fight that developed in preliminary skirmishing over the civil rights program—a fight in which the administration took a solid liking.

But the President is still hopeful that his program will go through.

He refused to admit that the other setbacks—his nomination of Mon Wallgren, the rent control upset, the 70-group Air Force battle—have been major defeats.

SCHUMAN pointed out the assurance given France that the West will rush to its protection.

The Italian chamber of deputies expressed its views of the pact yesterday in overcoming a Communist filibuster to endorse it by a vote of 342 to 170.

All British newspapers with the single exception of The Daily Worker praised the alliance.

In France, rightist newspapers hailed the pact, while leftist newspapers were more reserved in their comments.

Purpose of the concert is to promote interest in the Circleville Booster Club's benefit circus, to be staged on Pickaway Fairgrounds April 16.

The benefit circus will be sponsored to earn funds for the high school band, for purchase of new instruments, uniforms and other paraphernalia.

Plans also have tentatively been laid for an all-county performance in Fairgrounds Coliseum on April 8. The band is to be aided at intermission by several acts from the Mills Brothers' circus.

Bandmen are to meet in the high school Friday and should be ready to leave promptly at 6 p. m.

Booster Clubbers are to transport the group to New Holland by auto, and report they still need several autos for the trip. Anyone wishing to make the trip and carry bandmen are asked to contact Wendell Turner.

200,000 Arabs Get Aid From Quakers Of U.S.

PHILADELPHIA, March 19—The American Friends Service Committee announced today it is providing a daily ration of 2,000 calories for the approximately 200,000 Arab refugees in Egyptian-controlled southern and southwestern Palestine.

Supplies for this program are furnished by the United Nations Relief for Palestine Refugees program.

Food being distributed to the refugees consists of flour, milk, margarine, oil, dates, beans, some canned meat and other items. In addition to the food, the Committee has distributed more than 100,000 blankets and nearly 1,300 tents. A medical program is furnishing medical aid for the refugees and schools are being set up for the children.

Using supplies furnished by UNICEF (United Nations International Children's Emergency Fund), 20,000 to 25,000 pregnant women, nursing mothers, and children under three years of age are receiving milk rations. It is planned to extend the program to all children under 15 years of age.

Last Spring the refugees began streaming into the Gaza area of southern Palestine until more than 200,000 of them were crowded into a corridor, adjacent to the Egyptian border, which is only 25 miles long and eight miles wide.

Most of them brought with them no more possessions than the clothes they wore. What resources they might have had were soon expended for food. There was not enough shelter, and soon every available building or scrap of tent was overflowing with people.

Abandoned buildings, former prison cells, Samson's tomb, caves, holes in the ground or just the great outdoors were—and still are—"home" to the refugees. In October it was estimated that 120 people were dying each day in the Gaza area from malnutrition, over-exposure, and from after-effects of simple diseases.

Last November the United Nations created the United Nations Relief for Palestine Refugees program, which called for a $32 million budget. Member nations promised to supply the funds for the budget, the United States offering to ask Congress for $16 million, or half the total amount.

Jesus Trains the Twelve

ILLUSTRATED SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

By Alfred J. Buescher

Scripture—Mark 6:7-12, 30-44; Luke 11:1-4, 9-13.

Jesus called the chosen twelve apostles to Him and began to send them out two by two, giving them power over unclean spirits and instructing on what to take and how to act on the way.

After preaching, the twelve came to Jesus and told Him all the things they had done and what they had taught, and Jesus told them to come with Him to a desert place and rest a while.

When Jesus and His disciples arrived at the desert place they found that a crowd of people had gone ahead, knowing that Jesus was going to that place, and were waiting for them.

Jesus began to teach the multitude, but when it grew late, the apostles said the people should eat, but Jesus fed them all with five loaves and two fishes.

BASES ABROAD

AN EMPHATIC point has been made of assurances given to Norway and Iceland that if they should join the projected North Atlantic Defense Treaty they would not be required to permit establishment of United States military bases on their soil in peace time. Equally positive assurance should be given with respect to other nations involved, not only to the nations themselves but to the world at large and to the American people in particular.

In joining this defensive alliance of the North Atlantic, the United States is not setting out to garrison the world. If there is any doubt on that point, in Washington or anywhere else, it should be cleared up before the Senate approaches the question of ratifying the treaty. We cannot afford to garrison the world. Nor would we wish to do so.

The United States already has an extensive system of bases in all part of the world. Presumably these bases are no more than the minimum required for our national safety and for carrying out the commitments resulting from the war. We should assure everyone, including ourselves, that we do not intend or desire to push the out-reaching fingers of our military system beyond that minimum point of defense.

HAPPY DAYS

IF OUR secretary of the Treasury, chairman of congressional ways and means committees, and other officials responsible for our finances were suddenly transported to the days of Andrew Jackson, they would think that they had come to a dream world. What they could find hard to believe would be that the national debt, instead of being about a quarter of a trillion dollars, was only 48 million, and that even this modest amount was being extinguished at the rate of some 12 million a year.

In fact, as Charles M. Wiltz points out in his new life of John C. Calhoun, President Jackson was disturbed as to what to do with the federal surplus when the national debt was paid off. In his message he hit on the immensely popular notion of dividing it up proportionately among the states, and passing a constitutional amendment to legalize the transaction.

One safe prophecy is that no such constitutional amendment will now be needed for many decades to come.

It has long been assumed that the wicked will go up in fire and smoke, but as time passes, it grows harder to separate the wicked from those who are merely having a good time.

Pages From the Diary of An Antiquated Reporter:

Up to a chill morning of snow, so soon was outside with bread crusts and cornmeal for the birds. Later noticed none except starlings at the breakfast. No sign of the larks, red birds and robins that for several days had been presenting a glorious daybreak chorus. Late risers, maybe. Tied up only briefly over coffee and then was away for the village. Show covering everything, but destined to disappear before noon even though temperature hovered near freezing through the day.

Sessions with salesmen, one of whom I had not seen since early war days. Out after business again. For years his factory solicited no trade and appeared to take pleasure in writing letters notifying of six months to two years delay in delivery dates. No more. These travelers, however, are all optimistic on business for at least another year. Admit lay-offs in some lines, but declare they are only seasonal. Think they are right in their prophecies.

Downtown to have coffee alongside Don Henkle, Irv Reid and Councilmen Adkins and Montgomery. The aldermen have a great sense of humor. Otherwise they would be unable to take the verbal beating handed out by their friends. Chuckled at the conversation for a quarter hour and then took off to pass the time of day with Bill Defenbaugh and later call at Jim Yost's store only to find him home with a cold. Just back from a sojourn in warmer clime, too.

Note by the prints that President Harry remains critical of the high cost of living and still insists that he intends doing something about the situation. He pays income tax, so he apparently overlooked the fact that the highest priced item in the necessities list is government. That's the same fellow who is telling congress to up the cost of government and to raise taxes. Yipe!

Stopped in for a visit with Ron Barnes and remained an hour watching the manufacture of furniture veneer from black gum logs. The log turns on a shaft and a four foot knife peels off a thin slice. Beautiful grain. Saw a sweetheart cherry log, lumber from which will be fit to adorn the palace of a king. And a great walnut log almost in the same class. That's a busy place of Ron's, right now working seven days a week and swamped with orders.

Home over dry roads in the late afternoon and then down for a chat with George, not having had contact with him in about a month. Found him busy in the cattle barns and learned that he finally has set his cattle sale date for the ninth of next month. He has some of the finest milk stock I ever have seen, particularly the young stuff. And I am glad that bull is going on the block. Gentle enough with George and his helpers, but he is certain I am a stinker and tells me so every time he sees me. And I don't argue with him. Too much bass in his voice.

Asked George if his hogs were going in the sale and his reply was negative. Told him I had asked so that he could count on one less going under the hammer in the event that he invaded my back porch again. A regular rogue. Last time he visited the house I tore upstairs for a gun, but before I could get back down the hog had gone. Probably sensed the inhumanity. Shoot him if he returns, George said. And we may be having sausage in a few days.

George E. Sokolsky's

These Days

We talk a lot about one world, but there is a lot of the world we know nothing about. Out of an area in China which is called Sinkiang, in the history of the human race have come vast numbers of peoples who have not only conquered Europe but have settled there to form some of the nations that are now our problem.

In this area are such cities as Kashgar, Yarkand, Khotan, Urumtsi, Turfan—cities that have played great roles in European as well as Asiatic history. Out of the Tarim Basin came those peoples whom we know as the Turks, both Seljuks and Osmanli, the Hungarians (Magyars), the Scythians who peopled the Balkans, and many others about whom historians dispute. India, Afghanistan and Russian Turkestan lie on its borders. The Russians have built a railroad, the Turk-Sib, connecting the Trans-Caspian with the Trans-Siberian, on the borders of Sinkiang centering in the city of Alma-Ata.

This is an important area in the politics of the world. It is the mainland route from Russia to Western China. The people there are mostly not Chinese. Among them are nearly 5,000,000 Turkish Moslems, people who are the vestiges of the great Turkish empires that held Central and Western Asia, Europe to the gates of Vienna and North Africa. These people have never liked the Chinese. In China, there are about 12,000,000 Tungsans or Moslem Chinese who have maintained a relationship to the whole Moslem world. How important this can be noted from the fact that China always voted against Israel in the United Nations because Chiang Kai-Shek dared not antagonize his large Moslem population.

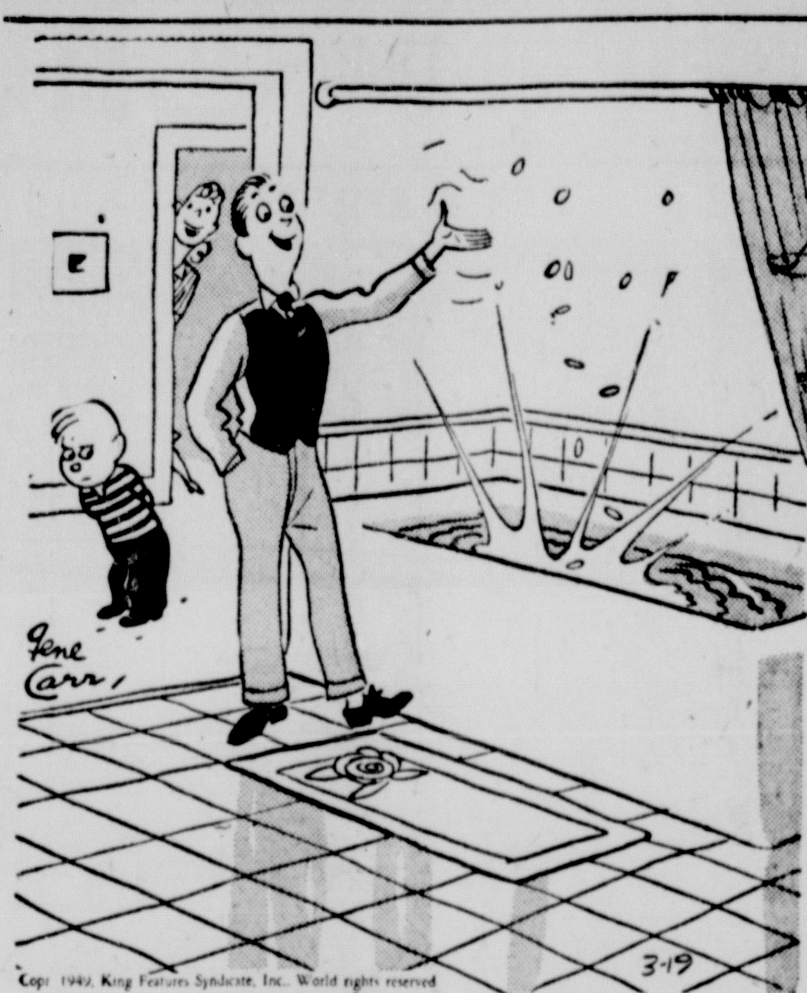

These people are mostly Nomads. They live in mountain and desert and their life is hard. Today they are surrounded on all sides by the power of Russia and there is no government in China they can look to. It is important for Russia to take Sinkiang which is now being done. It is important because it is possible out of Sinkiang to develop a pan-Turanian movement, a reuniting of all Turkish peoples, outside of Turkey, in Azerbaijan in Iran, in Afghanistan, in Kurdistan and elsewhere in Central Asia where vestigial Turkish elements remain. In this vast Sinkiang, larger than Great Britain, France and Germany put together, Russia can build a powerful Turkish force for the conquest of India and even for service in Western Asia and in Europe. These races once were on the march and they made history. They can do it again.

It was in this area that Genghis Khan won his great victory over Nestorian Christianity in the 13th Century. From here he and his descendants dominated an empire that included the whole of what is now Russia and China. It was from the Tarim Basin that these Mongols marched into Tibet and Kashmir and in time established the Mogul empire of India which lasted up to the British control of that sub-continent. It was through this area that Mahayanian Buddhism moved into China and eventually Korea and Japan. Its cities were oases on the highway between ancient Greece, ancient Palestine and ancient India and China.

Anemia in Pregnancy Still A Puzzler to the Doctors

By HERMAN N. BUNDESEN, M.D.

BECAUSE we have found answers to so many medical mysteries during recent years, many people believe that science understands all the body's secrets. I hate to destroy such an optimistic attitude, but, nevertheless, the truth is that even familiar processes still contain large elements of mystery.

One such puzzle is the anemia which develops in so many women during pregnancy. In a way, precise modern methods of research have served only to deepen the mystery because they have knocked the props out from under some of our favorite theories without bringing to light the true cause.

Lack of Iron

Since this anemia is typical of those due to a lack of iron, it would be very reasonable to suppose either that the expectant mother did not eat enough iron-containing foods or that for some reason she did not absorb iron well during this time, perhaps because of the lack of one or other of the vitamins contained in the B complex.

Recent, carefully controlled experiments indicate, however, that none of these things plays any significant role.

Drs. Talso and Diekmann of the University of Chicago studied 250 pregnant women with anemia. After repeated blood tests, some of the patients were treated with ferrous sulphate, an iron-containing preparation. Other iron compounds were tried on a second group of patients and, in certain cases, the iron treatment was reinforced with vitamin B-complex, liver extracts, and extracts from hog's stomach. In some instances, injections of whole blood were used as the only form of treatment.

These are all classic remedies for anemia and yet, in the case of these pregnant women, it was found that the treated patients made no better progress than those who received no treatment of any kind.

Neither inadequate dosage, lack of absorption of iron from the bowel, nor the increasing demand from the developing child seemed to play any part in causing the anemia. As a matter of fact, it was found that the coloring matter in the mother's blood decreased most rapidly during the time when the baby's growth was slowest, while during the last three months—the time when the baby's use of iron is greatest—the mother's blood was in its best condition.

Iron Absorbed Faster.

Nevertheless, it was shown that during pregnancy iron is absorbed two to ten times faster than it is in non-pregnant women.

The investigators concluded that the anemia of pregnancy is probably due to the fact that, in the majority of cases, the fluid part of the blood increases more rapidly than does the volume of the red cells which, as it were, are watered down. The fact that this thinning out occurs at the same rate, regardless of whether or not the patient receives treatment, indicates the need for a great deal more study to determine just why anemia occurs during pregnancy. Since all ordinary methods of combating anemia seem useless in these cases, the chances are that no effective treatment can be devised until the cause is found.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

A. J. C.: Is a sun lamp good for clearing up pimples?

Answer: Ultra-violet rays have been employed in the treatment of pimples. However, the condition can be corrected by proper diet, proper hygiene of the skin, and by the use of such preparations as the physician may prescribe.

BEAT THEM TO IT

IF THE opponents are able to peel off a trick or two, for enough to beat your suit contract, as soon as they get the lead, it is up to you to try to beat them to it. You should look around to see if there might be some way to discard that loser or those losers before they can get a whack at it or them. When such a set-up exists, you have no time to lose, but must do first things first.

After West led the diamond K, South studied his situation and was all ready to play his trump suit in the way which might keep the defense from getting any trick in it. His idea was to lead the dummy's Q and, if East did not cover, send it through in the hope of finding West with a singleton J. He still had the idea in mind when West shifted to a lead of the club K on the second trick. South took that with the dummy's A and embarked on his original plan. But West nabbed the trick with his heart K, scored the diamond A and led the club 7 to East's Q, so that the contract was down one almost before South could say "Jack Robinson."

A moment's pause by South would have shown him the danger of losing a quick club trick. Had he noted that situation, he could have ameliorated it easily. After taking the second trick with the club A, he should have scored the spade Q, led to the heart A and parked the dummy's two losing clubs on the spade A and K. After that there would have been no possible way for him to lose more than one trick in trumps and two in diamonds, his contract being as safe as a contract could be.

Your Week-End Question

Under what circumstances should you take out your partner's business double of a low bid, even though you feel certain their contract can be set a number of tricks?

And Have Not Love

By MARGARET NICHOLS

CHAPTER FOURTEEN

BEATRICE thought, I want to run out and be free. And I stand holding Mrs. Ramsey's coat for her, picking up the glove she dropped. And now we shall go to the same tea shop and sit at a table by the window because she wants to sit at a table where she can see the people on the street and say mean, petty, nasty things about them. And we shall have tea and pastry, and because of the pastry I won't be hungry for dinner. But I have to have it because it makes her more comfortable for me to have the same thing that she has. And even after I take her home and walk down the steps alone, I shall not be free of her.

Mrs. Ramsey turned to the child-ropodist to pay him. "I have a charming chauffeur, have I not?" she asked. "For years my husband has wanted to give me a car and a chauffeur. But I have told him not to. Why should I have them when I have Mrs. Farish?"

As they walked down the street Mrs. Ramsey asked, "Isn't Marianne coming to spend the night with me any more?"

Not Marianne, Beatrice thought. You may not have her.

Beatrice turned to her and smiled, hating the dishonesty contained in her warm smile. "Oh, children go through phases. One of them is spending the night with their school friends, and the friends in turn spending the night with them. She's dated up for several Saturday nights. They do have a lot of fun."

"Anyway," Mrs. Ramsey replied, "I won't have my little darling growing away from me. Think it over, Beatrice."

She was a lone figure in the park walking over dead, wet leaves. The obscured everything that was not within a few feet. Night would come soon after the briefest of twilight. A train whistle, melancholy and close, suggested the exhilaration of travel. To go away, Beatrice thought, and in quiet solitude to trace her inward stress, to scrutinize it, to think through to the larger objective, to struggle toward greater strength.

She did not see him until he was so close to her that he had only to reach out his hand to take her arm.

"David!"

He laughed. "Of course. Who else would venture out in this? Do you believe in coincidence, Beatrice?"

"No, I don't."

"Good, because this isn't one. I called your house to inquire about your daughter, and your maid said that you were walking in the park. You wouldn't, by any chance, come to my apartment?"

"No, David, I wouldn't."

"I didn't think you would. It's a pity, too, because it's such a comfortable one. Books and a fireplace. These days when you say you have an apartment, the next thing people want to know is how you came by it. The former tenants had to move because there wasn't room for a baby." He looked down at her and smiled, and his voice seemed not only to me too deeply?

speak to her, but also to touch her. "But why don't we just talk about you?"

Beatrice glanced up and smiled. "You take life lightly, don't you?"

"I want to be sure that I laugh last. But lightness is not necessarily flippancy. Don't accuse me of that."

"I don't accuse you of anything."

"You could. You could accuse me of falling in love with you."

"Shall we... walk?"

His mouth pulled humorously at one corner. "Very well. Let's walk while I tell you my malady, Beatrice."

"Please don't be serious."

He laughed again. As they moved, he put his hand in the pocket of her coat and held her hand tightly. "Beatrice, you have reached that point in life where to you husband and you are not a woman; you are only a badge for his success. There are far too many unloved women eating their hearts out for simple attentions, a little tenderness, for recognition of themselves as women. I'm very sorry for women."

"I've never heard a man say that before. Most of them think that women have such an easy time."

"Because of vacuum cleaners and dish washers? Women have been emancipated, but for what?"

"For tender comradeship."

"So brave and so busy," he said, "and so unsure of themselves, so frustrated."

"What about children?" Beatrice asked.

"You force your children into a pattern approved of by the neighbors. It doesn't seem to matter that they are often pushed beyond their capacities. If a child isn't successful, he's a problem child. Mothers give their love in proportion to the child's success."

She nodded a little sadly. "I agree with everything you say, David. Love has come to have a non-reciprocal quality. Women love, but they do not ask that those they love love them."

The hand upon hers tightened. "I want you to like me too, Beatrice. And that's not as simple as it sounds. It's almost more difficult to achieve than love. You're very lovely..."

"You can't see me."

"I can always see you. I am always seeing you."

"You speak in riddles. There is only one unknown. There is only our unknown."

Unknown, she thought. My unknown? It seems that I don't know anything for certain anymore except this, only this—that when I'm with you, David, I feel no guilt picking at my sleeve, that you, too, have the magic of human warmth. And that I love Porter not with the fierce joy of inrush of life, but sorrowfully.

"Who are you, David?"

"Just a man. A simple man. Beatrice. Life in South Africa is not very different from life here. Both are young countries. I have a house, servants, and I belong to a country club. Don't make me out a brigand, or an adventurer. Can't you understand, Beatrice, that I let life touch me only lightly now, because once it touched me too deeply?"

The House That Jack (A Mule) Built Aging Ohio River Mansion Has Unique History

By LAURA FENNER
Central Press Correspondent

BELLAIRE, O.—On a hillside overlooking the Ohio river on the western outskirts of this city, stands a unique old mansion still known as the House that Jack Built because it was largely the result of unremitting labor on the part of a tiny mule named Jack.

The house was built in 1870, but the story of the builder goes back to England in 1814 when he, Jacob Heatherington, was born.

The Heatheringtons were miners. Young Jacob went to work at the age of seven in an English coal mine. Despite hard work Jacob thrived, and when still quite young came to America and Bellaire with his father and three brothers, to work at the trade they knew best. Mining in that vicinity was carried on to a great extent in the hills bordering the river, from which vantage point it was shunted down to the coal barges for removal by water to destinations as far south as New Orleans.

When Jacob was 23 years old he started on his first business venture by renting a coal bank and buying eight acres of hill land under which he was pretty certain lay rich coal deposits.

For a while he followed the procedure of many individual coal miners in the vicinity by carting the coal from the mine in a wheelbarrow, but his business grew and he saw the advantage of increased production, so he took on a helper; a tiny mule named Jack.

WITH JACK'S HELP pulling the coal cart, coal output increased many times, laying the foundation for the Heatherington fortune. Year after year the two worked together, forming a close attachment for each other that was to last until death parted them.

Jacob's land increased from the eight acres he had bought on credit to more than 800 acres. He owned a fleet of river boats, he possessed many houses which he rented and had a goodly number of shares of stock in the Bellaire glass works.

Jack was retired to his stable and a grassy hillside at the age of 25, when his partner employed more modern and less tedious methods of extracting coal from the hills. It was in that period The House That Jack Built came into being.

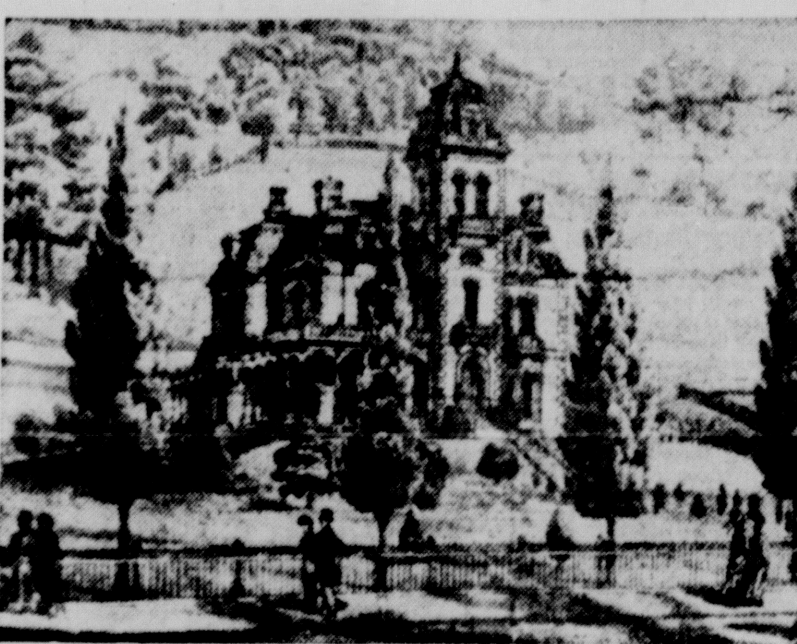

From the very time the architect's plans were drawn Jacob said it was to be known as The House That Jack Built, because but for Jack he would still be a poor man trundling out coal in a wheelbarrow.

INTO THE HOME went the finest of materials, from the sturdy foundations to the cupola surmounting the tower five stories above.

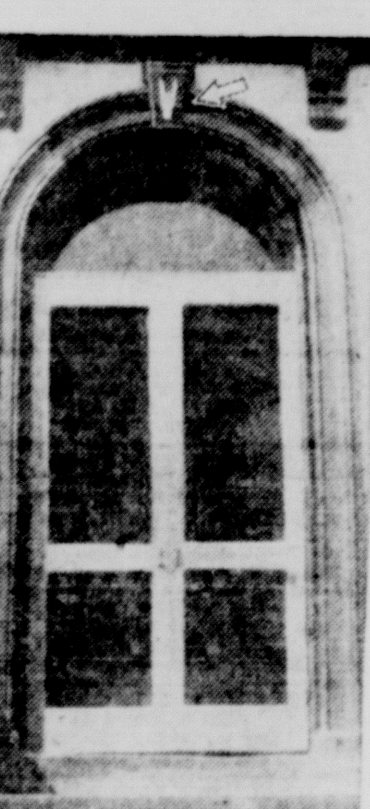

Fine woods were imported as also was marble. Verandas surrounded the house and carved heads of a Grecian goddess adorned window and door trimmings.

However, the keystone above the arched front entrance still pays silent tribute to the one Jacob Heatherington gave all the credit for the fortune he amassed—on it was carved the head of Jack.

Then came the big day. The house was completely finished and the Heatheringtons were ready to move in. Neighbors and friends invited to the housewarming stood in the doorway, but before they entered a beloved personage was to be honored.

Jack who had been groomed until his coat shone, was led by his partner up the stone steps to the front door. There Jacob pointed to the keystone as the first surprise for Jack.

Through room after room Jacob led Jack, talking to him constantly and pointing out this room or that piece of furniture, telling the little fellow that this was the house built by his hard work and loyalty.

It is said as they progressed through the house Jack seemed to understand. He caressed Jacob with his head and his braying answers of approval reverberated through the halls.

JACK LIVED to the age of 40 and was sorrowfully buried on the hillside near the mansion.

Mrs. Heatherington died in 1896. After her death Jacob sent to England for a monument. Carved life-size is the likeness of his wife Eliza, seated with an open Bible on her knee. This monument is on the family lot in Greenwood cemetery, high above Bellaire. Jacob died in 1904 and rests beside his wife.

In the years following Jacob's death the mansion gradually fell into decline. It had served its purpose as the home of Jacob and his family, but it was too large for practical use.

Eventually, it was sold and in the years intervening has been used in various ways—as a rooming house; then made into apartments. Finally a portion of it was used for a night club.

The verandas, for the most part, have been removed, as also the cupola surmounting the tower. Several carved heads of the Grecian goddess lie at the edge of a garden plot in the rear. However, the old mansion still commands attention from the many motorists who daily pass by on Route 7.

Teen Tips

If you think you have problems, take a quick look at what's puzzling other high school girls and boys . . . and maybe you'll go back to your algebra with a sigh of relief. A 16-year-old girl writes:

"I've written to you for help several times, but have never received an answer. I like a 17-year-old boy very much. He has asked me for dates, but my folks say I'm too young to go out with boys. They even object to him coming to our house. I've tried to compromise with my parents, but they won't listen to me. They tell me to tell him to find another girl, but I do like him and he likes me. Please help me!"

Ans.—Your previous letters weren't answered because you didn't sign your name and address and didn't enclose a stamped envelope for a reply. But to prove that letters are answered in this column, here's a suggestion.

If you can be trusted to behave well on dates and come home on time, your parents' attitude is unreasonable. If you don't begin now to get acquainted with boys, attend school dances and other doings and have an occasional movie date, you'll miss much of the wholesome "teen-time fun that should be a normal part of growing. Mention to your parents casually what other girls and boys are doing at school affairs, games, clubs and dates, so they'll perhaps realize gradually that you're missing normal associations.

Try to get their permission to invite a girl friend and two nice boys to your home Saturday evening to play games, make popcorn. Explain to the girl and "deadline" is, so they'll know when to go home, giving no cause for complaint. When your parents have this chance to meet some of your friends, they might see the light and allow you to have dates.

For tips on the correct care of oily, blemished skin, send a stamped, self-addressed envelope to Elinor Williams in care of The Circleville Herald.

There Russia is now expanding. And there can be no resistance, for the Turkish peoples and the Chinese in Sinkiang can have no assistance from anywhere. The Russians are able to prove their strength by the collapse of Chiang Kai-shek's authority. A simple nomadic people, living under their emirs and mullahs in a feudal state, they know nothing about such concepts as Democracy.

All they can know is that they either surrender or fight—and fight alone. Besides, many of their kinsmen live across the border in the Kirghiz, Kazak, Uzbek areas of Russia.

N. L. D. McLean, writing on this subject, points to the fact that Moslem Turkish peoples live from the Dobruja in Bulgaria to the borders of Mongolia. He says:

"Just as in Europe much of Soviet political strength comes from pan-Slavism linked with Moscow, . . . so in Central Asia today there are signs that the Soviets are trying to create a pan-Turanian movement linked with Moscow."

It is something to know even if we can do nothing about it.

DAIRY HERD AT AUCTION

LANCASTER TO MEET BIG BLUE

Hamilton, Lockland Tagged Teams To Beat For Crown

COLUMBUS, March 19—A couple of teams from down Cincinnati way—Hamilton in Class A and Lockland-Wayne in Class B—still are the teams to beat to win this year's state high school basketball titles.

Both scored impressive victories last night to enter regional final play tonight. Eight teams in each division are all that survive the first three weeks of the annual high school cage merry-go-round.

Hamilton's Big Blue knocked off Middletown, its traditional foe and three-time state champ, by a 41-36 score to enter the Queen City regional finals against Lancaster.

Lockland-Wayne, of Hamilton

County, almost doubled the score on Hollansburg to gain a finals berth in the Springfield Class B regional against New Vienna tonight. The final count showed the powerful Lockland squad on top a 67-39 score.

THE FOUR CLASS A teams who will travel to Columbus and the state finals next week will be determined in regional finals between Lancaster and Hamilton; undefeated Lakewood and Akron St. Vincent; Niles and Struthers; and Toledo Catholic and Mansfield.

Lakewood and Akron St. Vincent gained the finals at Kent with 33-28 and 51-31 wins over Cleveland Central and Akron Garfield, respectively.

Niles eliminated New Philadelphia, 49 to 46, and Struthers, the Cinderella team, upset unbeaten Garfield Heights, 45-44, in the Youngstown regional semi-finals.

Toledo Catholic trounced Columbus Central, 61 to 30, and Mansfield recorded a 50-43 win over Bowling Green in the other Toledo regional semi-final.

Only one game in addition to Lockland-Wayne's walkaway was played last night in Class B. It was in the Athens regional and saw once-beaten New Lexington eliminate New Boston of Scioto County, 45 to 41.

The four Class B teams to earn a trip to Columbus next week will be the winners of games between Lockland-Wayne and New Vienna; Woodsfield and New Lexington; North Canton and Lowellville; and Delphos St. Johns and undefeated Salem Township of Wyandot County.

Last night's win was Hamilton's third victory of the year over the Middies. Hamilton had a 21-18 margin after a first half saw the lead change hands six times.

THE BIG BLUE stepped out after the intermission and, except for one brief minute when the Middies tied the score, they were never headed. It was Hamilton's 22nd win in 23 starts, the lone loss coming in the first game of the season.

Lakewood, in eliminating Cleveland Central in the Kent regional, chalked up its 19th straight win of the year while its opponent tonight, Akron St. Vincent, now has a 16-win and five loss record.

The highly-regarded Columbus Central combine never got going against Toledo Catholic, the team that was beaten by Toledo Libbey in the sectionals but got another chance under a setup that sent both winner and runner-up to district play. Toledo had a 19-13 lead at the first quarter and led 34-19 at the half.

Mansfield had a tougher time earning a place in the elimination tonight. The Tigers had Bowling Green, 23-22 at the half and the game was close until the last few minutes when four Mansfield baskets in quick succession put the game on ice.

Garfield Heights had won 22 in a row but that made no difference to a Struthers five that had won only 9 of 21 games. Struthers will play Niles, another squad with a not too impressive worst record in the Youngstown regional finals tonight. Niles upset a favored New Philadelphia team, 49 to 46, for win No. 12 against nine defeats.

Next week's eight state finalists in the tourney will be determined from the following regional finals tonight:

CLASS A
At Cincinnati—Hamilton (22-1) vs Lancaster (23-2).
At Kent—Lakewood (19-0) vs Akron St. Vincent (16-5).

At Youngstown—Niles (12-9) vs Struthers (10-12).
At Toledo—Toledo Catholic (24-3) vs Mansfield (19-7).

CLASS B
At Springfield—Lockland-Wayne (29-1) vs New Vienna (26-2).
At Athens—Woodsfield (28-2) vs New Lexington (25-1).

At Kent—Lowellville (23-2) vs North Canton (21-6).
At Toledo—Delphos St. John (26-3) vs Salem Township (28-0).

Spring Camp Roundup

Chicago's White Sox are doing some lusty slugging these days for a club that is supposed to be as weak with the willow as its famous predecessor, the "hitless wonder" outfit of another era.

The Pale Hose, after walloping the World's Champion Cleveland Indians 15 to 4 on Thursday, really teed off against the New York Giants yesterday and outscored them 22 to 13. That's a total of 37 runs in two days.

Elsewhere, the pitchers were mainly in the saddle. Prof. Casey Stengel, the eminent psychologist of the New York Yankees, sent Vic Raschi against the Red Sox to build up confidence, because Vic hadn't beaten Boston in two years. Raschi came through and held the Sox hitless for the four innings he worked, the Yanks winning 5 to 0.

The New York pitching staff has blanked the opposition for 19 consecutive innings. A homer by Grady Hatton gave Cincinnati a 9 to 8 win over the Phillies.

GOOD PITCHING featured the clash between the St. Louis Cardinals and the Boston Braves, but a homer by Stan Musial gave the Cards a 2 to 1 decision.

Dick Fowler of the Philadelphia Athletics hurled five perfect frames and then retired as the A's downed Memphis, 2 to 1. Manager Lou Boudreau of the Cleveland Indians quit worrying about his veteran infield today and started concentrating on Bob Feller.

Apparently nothing is wrong with three-fourths of the Tribe's inner cordon—witness Cleveland's 10-3 victory over the Chicago Cubs yesterday with Joe Gordon, Ken Keltner and Boudreau himself all sharing top roles.

Feller, pasted last Sunday by the New York Giants, was to try again today against the Cubs for his first win of the Spring exhibition campaign. Steve Gromek was to follow Feller.

Gene Bearden, Cleveland's top hurler last year, showed up admirably in yesterday's triumph. The sophomore southpaw yielded but four hits in six innings.

Promoter After Walcutt-Charles Bout In Cincy

MIAMI BEACH, March 19—Promoter Sam Becker will carry his battle to land a world champion match between Jersey Joe Walcutt and Ezzard Charles for Cincinnati to a Chicago meeting March 23.

Becker, who also is a Cincinnati clothing manufacturer, conferred with Joe Louis and his agent Harry Mandel, and Chicago Millionaires James Norris and Art Wirtz for two hours here yesterday.

The Cincinnati said the Louis group objected somewhat to his guarantee of $125,000 to them and $50,000 to each of the fighters, but that he was confident the differences would be ironed out in Chicago.

Berker's bout would be at Crosley Field in July. He also said he had made offers to Joey Maxim and Former Light Heavyweight Champion Gus Lesnevich for a non-title go in June.

The Louis group has signed Charles and Walcutt for a bout that would carry the title with it as far as the National Boxing Association is concerned, but the location still is up in the air.

Ashville Seniors Complete First Grade Enumeration

Beginner Ranks Seen As Steady

32 Prospects Due For Fall Class

Ashville elementary school apparently will be large enough to handle its student beginners for the next three or four years at least.

The senior class of the Ashville school recently undertook a census in their school district to give board of education members an indication as to how many students they may expect in the future.

According to the figures turned in by the seniors, classes in the school remain the same to slightly smaller for at least three years.

The enumeration census required the senior classmen to give a detailed report of the number of births in the area since 1943. The 1943 births will be the first grade students in the school this fall.

The seniors have reported that there are only 32 prospective fall first graders in the district, a decrease of approximately eight in the yearly average of 40 which usually report.

WALTER HARRIS, superintendent of the school, said that the complete survey required only one week, and "of course the seniors might have missed some." He asked that anyone knowing of unreported 1943 births notify him.

Here is the list of next fall's known first graders:

Gary Edward Bainter, Peggy Jo Bartholomew, Thomas Frank Bradburn, Geraldine Clements, Janet Ann Cline, Clarence Michael Cloud, David Eugene Cooper, James Lowell Cooper, Jerry Lee Crago, William Roe Cromley, Marvin Leroy Devors, Dorothy Estella Dickinson.

Martha Ann Dore, Cella Dianne Dummitt, Carol Ann Fout, Carolyn Lee Fout, James Leroy Franks, Billy Jack Foreman, Nancy Lee Harris, Barbara Alice Hickman, Janet Sue Hogsten, Gale Richard Hollandback, Rodney Eugene Hoover.

Paul Elden Lawhun, William Arbie LeMaster, Dianne Rose Mallory, Michael Wright Purcell, Nicholas Loy Radford, Phyllis Ann Smith, Teresa Ann Trone, Patti Ann Wilcox and Donald Armond Younk.

The room situation looks good for the school during the next few years also, with only 25 births reported for 1944, 35 for 1945, 27 for 1946, 37 for 1947, 34 for 1948 and six to date in 1949.

Grangers Set For State Meet

COLUMBUS, March 19—Over 450 State Grange members will attend the four-day Grange conference opening Monday at Ohio State university.

Speakers at the banquet to be held on the campus Wednesday evening will include the state senate majority leader, Margaret Mahoney, and L. L. Rummel, dean of the Ohio State college of agriculture.

Delegates are to visit the state legislature Monday evening to view Ohio government in action. Gov. Frank Lausche will be on hand to greet members.

Crooner Cause Jukebox Fire?

COLUMBUS, March 19—Russ Morgan burst into song last night—and the juke box in the M and V Luncheon burst into flame. As the strains of "Forever and Ever" welled up from the machine, the strain was too much for a fluorescent light. It burst, burning out a transformer and filling the luncheon with pungent smoke.

Steel License Tags Seen Ahead

COLUMBUS, March 19—Warden Ralph W. Alvis said that 1950 truck and trailer license tags may soon be made out of steel instead of aluminum.

The Ohio penitentiary head stated that unless steel becomes available, the aluminum tags, with which Gov. Frank Lausche is "dissatisfied" will continue to be made.

Jet Aircraft To Set Distance Marks—Belief

CLEVELAND, March 19—John Stack, co-winner of the 1948 Collier Award for aeronautical research, predicted today that thermo-jet propelled airplanes will surpass all existing long-distance flight records.

In an address to more than 500 of the country's top jet engine experts, in Cleveland for the fourth national flight propulsion meeting of the Institute of the Aeronautical Sciences, Stack declared:

"Developments in aeronautical research go beyond national defense—they filter through the entire industrial machine. New approaches are needed in the study of flight to permit greater improvements in jet-propelled aircraft."

He asserted that "there is no doubt that the United States leads the world in aeronautical research."

"Of course, Russia, or any other country, may develop certain aspects beyond our present efforts. But, taken as a whole, aeronautical research is based on the broad, industrial background of the country. And in that respect, no nation can equal us at the present time."

Stack added that "jet engine development is just beginning" and continued that atomic energy as a motive power for planes will come, but that it is too early to make reliable forecasts.

"One thing is certain," he continued, "a plane powered with atomic energy will have virtually unlimited range."

Stack said the reciprocating (propeller-driven) engine eventually will be abandoned in favor of jets. However, this development hinges on improved efficiency of present jet engines and resulting lower costs.

'Acid Killer' Given Hearing

HORSHAM, Eng., March 19—Dapper John Haigh, Britain's suspected "acid-bath killer," made a brief appearance in court here yesterday while hundreds of spectators—mostly women—jammed the hearing room and milled outside.

Haigh, 40, is charged with the acid-bath slaying of Mrs. Olive Durand-Deacon, 69. The court delayed his case until next Friday, so that police can continue the investigation of his case.

Scotland Yard is investigating six additional killings similar to the murder of Mrs. Durand-Deacon.

Even With Poem, Government Shuns New Marvel Mousetrap

WASHINGTON, March 19—The world will have to wait a little longer for that "better mousetrap" which philosophers predict will bring both fame and fortune to its maker.

A would-be midwestern manufacturer penned a poem to the government today, asking that it help him get the necessary steel for mass producing an "electric cat."

The verse said that the device automatically would electrocute the rodents and stockpile them for future disposition.

But the government, while agreeing to the need for "better mousetraps," said it wasn't in a spot to help.

It was "sympathetic," the government said, but nothing could be done in Washington.

The would-be manufacturer runs a small electrical repair shop in rural Indiana and said he's spent about $60 thousand to date.

COLUMBUS, March 19—A man and two children were suffocated early today in a davenport fire in an apartment above the Dutch Cafe here.

Dead are David W. Short, 49, Richard White, 3, and his sister, Ruth Ann, 2.

Firemen found the girl in bed and the others lying on the living room floor of the third floor flat this morning. They said a cigarette had apparently started the $800 blaze.

Police said the children's mother, Lucille White, 26, was last seen at the bar of the cafe with a friend an hour or so before the fire broke out.

Cincy Man Gets Jail Sentence

COLUMBUS, March 19—Charles W. Marcum, 24-year-old Cincinnati, began a 10-to-25 year sentence today for the armed robbery of a Columbus jewelry store.

It took a Franklin County criminal court jury just 13 minutes to convict the man yesterday and Judge Joseph M. Clifford a few minutes more to pronounce sentence.

Defense witnesses, Thomas E. Dickerson, 25, of Baltimore, Md., and John G. Reed, of Niles, testified that Marcum did not accompany them in the $5,500 robbery last Oct. 18. Both received similar sentences recently. They had pleaded guilty.

State Avoiding Permit Dispute

COLUMBUS, March 19—The state liquor department stood clear today of a developing legal battle between two Cleveland firms engaged in the wholesale distribution of less intoxicating beverages.

Liquor Director Oscar L. Fleckner was dismissed as a party in the action brought against the Ale and Beer, Inc., by the Miller Becker Co.

The Miller firm brought suit to enjoin Ale and Beer from securing the franchise for the sale of Ballantine products. Fleckner was named as a defendant in an attempt to restrain the liquor department from issuing a whole permit to Ale and Beer.
